

Acknowledging Royal Irish Academy Funding

About the Royal Irish Academy (RIA)

In line with its aims and remit the RIA has a long history of promoting, supporting and communicating research. The Academy began providing research grants in 1876, and this legacy of supporting academic researchers in Ireland continues today. Through the vehicle of its various grant schemes world class researchers are identified and recognised throughout their careers.

The RIA is proud to play a part in promoting excellence in scholarship and recognising achievements in learning.

By using our logo and recognising our funding, it is clear that the Royal Irish Academy has supported your work.

Why we want you to acknowledge our funding

- To increase awareness of how public money is spent
- Acknowledgement supports us by showing the breadth of research in progress across the country each year
- Identification means we can highlight, track and promote, and by effectively highlighting this work we can further increase awareness of the world class research going on in Ireland
- By acknowledging RIA funding, you are helping to improve public understanding of how we are all working together to develop Ireland's research infrastructure nationally and strengthen international collaborations

Obligations of RIA funding:

All grant recipients must acknowledge RIA funding in all publicity associated with or arising from research undertaken as part of an RIA grant, including interviews, public lectures, print and online material (publications, media coverage, websites, presentations, programmes, posters, brochures, invitations and advertisements material), press releases, television or radio advertisements, and recordings, in line with the requirements below.

All grant recipients should display the RIA logo, according to the guidelines provided for its use below, in all materials outlined above associated with the funded project.

The contents of any press releases or announcements associated with the Grant should be agreed by the RIA first to ensure they comply with current publicity requirements.

How to acknowledge RIA funding:

- All printed and digital material should include a line acknowledging the funding "Research was funded (or supported) by the Royal Irish Academy" and where practical should include our full logo and a link to our website www.ria.ie
